19. About Nigeria

Nigeria, often called the "Giant of Africa," is a West African country known for its vast population, rich cultural diversity, and economic potential. It is the most populous country in Africa, with well over 200 million people, and is bordered by Benin Republic, Niger, Chad, and Cameroon. The country's coastline stretches along the Gulf of Guinea, providing access to international trade and commerce.

History and Politics

Nigeria's history dates back to ancient civilizations such as the Nok, Ife, and Benin Kingdoms. The region became a British colony in the late 19th century and gained independence on October 1, 1960. Since then, Nigeria has experienced military rule, civil war (1967–1970), and transitions between democratic and autocratic governments. Today, it operates as a federal republic with 36 states and a Federal Capital Territory (Abuja).

Economy

Nigeria has Africa's largest economy, driven by oil and gas, agriculture, technology, and entertainment. The country is one of the world's top oil producers, but it also faces various challenges. The tech industry, especially in Lagos, is booming, with start-ups attracting international investments. Nollywood, Nigeria's movie industry is the second-largest film producer globally, contributing significantly to the nation's economy.

Culture and Society

With over 250 ethnic groups and 500 languages, Nigeria is a cultural powerhouse. The three largest ethnic groups are (in no particular order):

Yoruba (Southwest) – Famous for their art, literature, and business acumen

Hausa-Fulani (North) – Known for their political influence and trade

Igbo (Southeast) – Recognized for their entrepreneurial spirit and rich traditions

Nigeria is also a major force in global sports, music, and literature. Figures like Wole Soyinka, Chinua Achebe, Fela Kuti, and Burna Boy have put Nigeria on the world stage. The country's passion for football is legendary, with the Super Eagles being one of Africa's top team.

ABOUT ZONE 4.2 INDIVIDUAL CHESS CHAMPIONSHIPS

The Zone 4.2 Individual Chess Championships remains a key chess event for West African chess federations. Led by Ameku Philip of Ghana, the zone consists of countries like: Nigeria, Ghana, Cape Verde, Côte d'Ivoire, Senegal, Sierra Leone, among others, as well as the notable Fide Vice President Adeyemi Olalekan. The tournament, although no longer serving as a qualifier for the Chess World Cup, provides a crucial platform for regional talent development, as well as a Pre-Qualifier to the World Cup.

Key Players

Top active players from the zone include but are not limited to; the 2024 champion – FM Akintoye Abdulrahman Abdulraheem (Nigeria), IM Ortega Amarelle Mariano (Cape Verde), and CM Nicholas Cogan (Côte d'Ivoire).

Format and Details

The event features Open and Women's sections and uses a Swiss System pairing method, with both sections influencing the FIDE ratings of the players.
